Atterbury's solar solutions

NONHLANHLA MASEKO

PROPERTY development and investment company Atterbury has partnered with Sola Future Energy to provide solar energy and electrical storage solutions to Atterbury properties, Sola said yesterday.

The agreement is for 20MW of solar photovoltaic (PV) systems on properties which Atterbury has developed. The companies entered into the agreement in May.

Atterbury property development executive James Ehlers said solar-smart solutions will in future become a vital component of the industry.

Sola CEO Dom Wills said solar systems reduced operating costs over the long term, increasing property value and competitiveness.

The engineering company will provide the design and engineering services for the full 20MW, ensuring that the solar solutions to all of these developments are optimised.

It will also manage the installation during the project development phase and will help Atterbury with operation and maintenance.

The agreement covers all Atterbury projects in SA and selected projects in Africa and abroad.
